PREFACE

Since the first schedules of Class P were issued, the Library of Congress has generally issued the tables used in each subclass as an appendix to the appropriate schedule. Exceptions to this practice were occasionally made, making it necessary to consult another schedule for the required tables. Seemingly identical tables were published in different schedules with minor variations. Changes made to these tables throughout the years have created further variations. In some cases tables were printed within the schedule, instead of in the appendix. The result of these practices has been confusion and inconsistency.

To reduce confusion and to promote more convenient and consistent changes, the Library is issuing all frequently-used tables of Class P in this one volume. All tables were examined and revised as necessary to eliminate unnecessary or undesirable variations. Similar tables were combined, some infrequently-used tables were cancelled, and one new table was created. Changes were made with consideration for a minimum amount of disruption to previously classified material. Some tables have been renumbered so that no two tables would be referred to by the same number.

Included in this publication is a conversion table showing the old and new numbering. The individual subclasses are being revised to reflect this new numbering. List 206 of LC Classification—Additions and Changes will show appropriate changes made throughout Class P, reflecting the new and/or changed table numbering. It will also show the cancellation of previously published tables.

Millicent Wewerka, subject cataloger in the humanities, is primarily responsible for the content of this publication. The editorial work was done by Lawrence Buzard, editor of classification.
